Tabriz

Tabriz is one of the largest cities and historical capitals of Iran and the capital of East Azerbaijan Province. The City of Tabriz has an area of 324 km² (125 sq mi) and is situated at an altitude of 1,350 meters. Tabriz is located in a valley to the north of the long ridge of the volcanic cone of Sahand, south of Eynali Mountain. The valley opens out into a plain that slopes gently down to the northern end of Lake Urmia. The city is considered a summer resort because of temperate summers. The estimated population of the city is around 1,600,000 based on the results of Iranian Census Bureau. Its people speak Azeri Turkish. Tabriz International Airport, Train, and Bus Services facilitate travels for both domestic and international destinations. There are several historical monuments retaining their colorful past and architecture. Some of them are: Blue Mosque, Ali Shah Ark (mosque), Jameh Mosque, Historical Bazaar, the House of Constitution, the Tomb of Kamals, Aji Chai Bridge, Azerbaijan Museum, El-Goli, Municipality Building, and the Building of Sahand Architecture School. Tabriz also gets the name of "The city of the first ones" in Iran. It has pioneered establishment of the first printing house (with Islamic writing), the first school and the first kindergarten, the first school for the blind and the deaf; the compilation and publication of the first book for children; the development of Nastaliq handwriting method; the publication of the first newspaper and the establishment of the first university in Iran. Establishment of a university in Tabriz dates back to more than 700 years ago, when Khajeh Rashiduddin Fazlollah, the minister of Ghazan Khan, established a big academic quarter named Rabe Rashidi in Tabriz. This scientific and educational complex was equipped with a big paper factory, a big library, an educational -medical center (Dar-Al-Shafa), Dar-Al-Quran, a residence facility for teachers (Olama's Quarter), student's quarter, big caravanserais and other facilities
